CONGRESS TO OPEN WITHOUT PRESENCE OF CHIEF EXECUTIVE

Representative Rainey Announces President's Message Will Be Read to Nation's Lawmakers on January 3 by a Clerk.

6-BILLION BUDGET SEEN BY SPEAKER

Liquor Legislation First on Calendar; Roosevelt May Restore Part of Federal Pay Cut.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 25.—(AP)—President Roosevelt's first annual message to congress will be delivered on January 3—the first day of the session—after reading by a house clerk.

Speaker Rainey said today that contrary to reports, the president did not plan to deliver the message in person but some of Mr. Roosevelt's advisers are still urging him to appear in person to deliver the message to a joint session of the senate and house.

Democrats are contending that the country is more back of the president than a few months ago and that they are prepared to follow him in his recommendations, but Republicans generally are saying little and waiting developments.

Speaker Rainey said he expected the ordinary and extraordinary budgets to call for appropriations in excess of $6,000,000,000 for the fiscal year 1934. This includes the budget estimates of $2,600,000,000 for ordinary expenses of the government.

Other items. Of the balance, about $1,700,000,000 is to be asked for continuation of the public works employment program; about $500,000,000 for federal relief; additional capital for the Reconstruction Corporation for business stimulation and for the purchase of the house ways and means committee on the first day. It will call for a $2 million levy on spirits, $5 a barrel on beer, retain present duties on wines, spirits and brew, and all the revenue from these sources, estimated at more than $500,000,000, to go into the federal treasury.

Hudget Message. The president's budget message will be received by congress on the second day of the session. Indications are that the president, under the authority granted him in the economy act, may restore 5 per cent of the federal pay cut effective January 1, in view of increased living costs. The budget for the next fiscal year, beginning July 1, provides for restoration of the full 15 per cent.

The general revenue revision measure, designed to raise about $270,000,000 through tightening up of the administrative provisions of the income tax law, is scheduled for passage before March 15, that the bill is to be filed by individuals and corporations.

Program. On the tentative legislative program for the session, the bill to amend various provisions of the recovery program, enacted at the special session last spring, including the farm administration and relief acts; possible guaranteeing by the government of the principal of the home loan bonds in addition to interest, and possible changes in the security laws.

Merchants' Cash Stolen From Idaho City Jail

SALT LAKE CITY, Dec. 25.—(AP)—Merchants of Murray, south of the city, put their Saturday's receipts in what they thought the safest place in town—in the city jail.

The night marshals, Joseph Gillen and Ernest Caldwell, locked the key of the cell in a steel box. Then they went out on the patrol of the Murray business district.

When they returned several hours later, they found burglars had battered open the steel box, taken the key to the cell, removed the money and made their escape.

PEOPLE OF WORLD FORGET TROUBLES IN DAY OF CHEER

All Nations Take Heart in Belief Better Times Are Ahead; Optimism Best Since 1929.

By The Associated Press.

The cheer of Christmas yesterday covered all Christendom.

And into the American carol, especially, crept the merry note of increased yuletide spending—indicating, some trade reports state, the most optimistic holiday since 1929.

The world, perturbed by bickering and depression, forgot trouble and took heart in the belief that better times were ahead.

The weather was a conglomerate—snow, rains, subzero temperatures, sunshine. But what mattered the state of the sun or the winds? It was Christmas. There were the usual dinets, taking a toll of more than two score lives to dim happiness in some homes.

Washington, the first citizen of the United States, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, was a private personage for the day—giving out gifts to his family, to his friends, to his servants.

The day before in a Christmas message to the nation, the president paraphrased the immortal tiny tim with the words: "God bless us every one."

Shortly before, the president gave his yuletide greeting by extending amnesty to 1,500 Americans who evaded the draft or opposed the World War, by restoration of citizenship.

King George V, in his Christmas message to his British subjects, noted also the "sober progress toward recovery."

Former President Herbert Hoover, in Palo Alto, Cal., saw his family gather around a Christmas tree and receive gifts—as did the millions in the United States.

About 150 children in Birmingham were treated for burns from fireworks. In Cleveland, a man was killed in a fall from a second story as he lowered a Christmas tree to the ground.

A girl in Chicago fell down church steps and was fatally hurt. Automobile accidents took a large toll of life.

Tragedies of weather dappled the map. Santa had smooth going over snow in some sections. In others he had to don hip boots. Elsewhere, he discarded his fur coat and decked himself in a raincoat.

Flood victims on the Pacific northwest saw receding waters with extremely cold temperatures. Montana, Colorado, and Wyoming experienced cold and some snow; it was 42 degrees below zero in Elkhart, Minn., and the twin cities, St. Paul and Minneapolis, had the coldest weather in years.

Detroit Lakes, Minn., had the coldest Christmas in the history of its meteorological bureau—49 below zero. Oregon were balmy and California, while generally fair, shivered; Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma, and Kansas were several degrees from the comfort mark, and Nebraska was cold.

The south generally was warm, and the east, spotted with snow in sections, was whipped by cold winds.

4 GENERATIONS CELEBRATE CHRISTMAS AT WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 25.—(AP)—The cheer of an old-fashioned Christmas, in which four generations of Roosevelts participated, filled the White House today with the president, one of the leaders in the movement.

The morning's stocking opening and gift presentations over, President and Mrs. Roosevelt went to church. There they returned to the White House for the afternoon in examining the hundreds of gift packages that had flowed in upon them. Christmas dinner for the family came in the evening.

This brought to the White House various relatives and gave all four generations a representation. Of the immediate family, there were Mrs. James Roosevelt, the president's mother; Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt; their daughter, Anna Roosevelt Dall, and her brothers, John and Franklin Jr.; and two of the presidential grandchildren, "Sister" and "Buzzie" Dall.

The children started the day with cheerful shouts, leading the rest of the family to the president's bed. The stockings and examine the goodies that might be found inside.

Yule Observance in City Is Marked by Quiet, Joy

Weather and Hearts Are Warm as Atlanta Peacefully Joins Celebration; Poor Are Remembered With Food and Gifts.

Just 12 months to Christmas! Atlanta's 1933 yuletide Monday was warm in two ways, and was as quiet as it was significant.

The weather, unseasonal in its high temperature, turned off rainy in the afternoon, but the wetness did not dampen the high spirits of Christmas celebrants expressing their appreciation of Santa Claus most precious gift, renewed confidence and faith.

The weather's warmth was matched by the city's generosity to the poor and helpless.

Few arrests were noted on the police blotter, and these were mostly of those persons who let their suppressed desires for strong spirit get the best of them.

Atlanta's newsmen were entertained at the Piedmont hotel at dinner by a number of prominent business men, in a revival of a one-time annual custom.

Spreads of food were delivered to the poor by the "Big Brothers" and other organizations, so that no one went hungry. The Salvation Army gave its "Downy" dinner to 500 men and women at the Masonic temple.

Religious services occupied the attention of most of the citizens, many persons attending sunrise services and also going to services later in the morning.

Midnight communion and song services were held in the churches Christmas eve and into Monday morning.

During the morning, the children had a splendid opportunity of trying out their new skates, wheels and other toys, the rain holding off until the afternoon. Toys were distributed to poor children under auspices of Salvation Army, the Better Films committee, the woman's division of the Chamber of Commerce, the city schools, Fulton County Post No. 134, American Legion, and other organizations.

Spirits of the people were high Monday because of encouraging reports of better business conditions and increases in trade, indicating that 1934 will be a good year.

Police reported no major crimes, such as homicides, burglaries, hold-ups, and the like, had been brought to their attention since 7 o'clock Saturday morning, showing that even the criminal underworld was taking it easy over the holidays.

Just 12 months to Christmas—but only six days to New Year's Eve!

Bowman scaled the hospital wall with a fire hose after menacing the attendant, Frank Devoe, and patients with a pistol. He gained access to the firehouse by using Devoe's keys, and was believed to have escaped in an automobile belonging to another hospital attendant.

The fugitive was serving a term on a charge of robbery, committed prior to his escape from the Bowman gang in southern Ohio. He was brought to the hospital here from the state prison about 18 months ago.

Dominance of Profit Motive Assailed by Noted Educator

NEW YORK, Dec. 25.—(AP)—Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler this Christmas Day assailed the dominance of the profit motive in society.

The noted liberal, in his report as president of Columbia University, declared that "if profit, and profit alone, be the end sought by human effort, then society must reconcile itself to steady disintegration, constantly increasing conflict between individual groups and nations, and eventual destruction."

Moralists have been pointing out almost from the beginning of time, Dr. Butler said, that "it is only when men rise above domination by the profit motive and learn to subordinate profit to service that the social, economic and political orders begin to take shape in a firm foundation and a continuing existence, with peace and happiness assured to the great mass of mankind at last."

"It has remained for the happenings of the generation last past," the educator added, "to force these fundamental truths upon the attention of men everywhere, and to turn the thought of mankind not by any means toward the elimination of profit but toward its subordination to service."

Dr. Butler, discussing the resources of the world, said: "It is only as the world has come to be so widely and so largely settled and developed that it has dawned upon men how great is the loss of this generation and that of generations to come, for example, through the reckless use of natural resources for private profit."

If helpful service to one's fellow men be the dominant motive, Dr. Butler said, "then the greater the legitimate profit one makes, the more will he be applauded. Criticism and resistance come when the service motive disappears from sight and the profit motive dominates all."

Conditions of Frank Gossett, 19, of 1701 Langston avenue, and Joe Allen, of 294 Richardson street, who were stabbed Sunday night and Saturday night, respectively, in the Pryor street section, Monday were said to be fair at Grady hospital. Gossett said he was walking on Pryor when a negro stepped out and stabbed him in the back. Allen was found unconscious at Fair and Pryor streets.

MISSING BOY, 15, FOUND MURDERED

Tragedy Discovered On Christmas Day; Vengeance Suspected.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Dec. 25.—(AP)—A blood-smeared wisp of sandy hair protruding from a mass of cotton waste in a deserted house near Columbia today solved the 48-hour disappearance of Herbert H. Harris Jr., 15 years old.

Officers who were called to the scene uncovered the body of the youth with his skull battered in by a blow above each temple.

An iron bar, blood-spattered at one end, was found a short distance away. The cotton and rags, apparently the remains of a mattress, had been heaped into a grave-like mound over the body.

A search by federal and local officers for a middle-aged man believed Saturday to have kidnapped the boy was intensified by the discovery into a grimmer manhunt for one or more killers.

Sheriff T. Alex Heise said there were indications a spirit of revenge, possibly against the boy's father, prompted the slaying. He said the investigation was directed along this trend.

Young Harris last was seen with a bespectacled man in a light model car Saturday morning. His mother told officers she believed the man was the same who called at his home several times to offer him employment.

The boy set out Saturday morning to apply for the job and was reported to have gotten into the car with the man and driven off, apparently persuaded to take advantage of the offer.

From the condition of the body of the boy he was taken directly to the vacant house and killed there later Saturday.

Mrs. H. H. Harris, the boy's mother, was reported to be in a state of collapse owing to the intense strain of awaiting news of her son and the blow of his death.

Mr. Harris, a vice president of Home Stores, Inc., had offered a "liberal reward" for information leading to his son's return and said earlier today he would "give anything" for his safety.

Mrs. Sherwood Higgs, widely known Atlanta woman, of 80 Park Lane, is confined to her home with a broken hip, which she suffered on the night of Christmas Eve in a fall at her home. Physicians reported that Mrs. Higgs' condition was satisfactory.

BOY, SIGHTLESS SEVEN YEARS, SEES FIRST CHRISTMAS TREE: SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Dec. 25.—(AP)—With eyes that last year and all his life before had been sightless, 7-year-old Loren Lockhart, of Polk, Mo., saw the twinkling lights of a Christmas tree today for the first time.

"It's awful pretty," he said.

When he realized all the toys piled around were for him he spoke in wonder.

"How did Santa Claus know I was going to be here?" he asked.

Of all the gifts—and he got "a lot of stuff"—Loren liked best his colored crayons. Color is still a novelty to Loren.

Loren was in Springfield for Christmas as the guest of nurses in a hospital where, by a series of operations lasting more than two years, he was given sight. He had been born blind.

SANTA CLAUS PAYS VISIT TO TWO LONELY LIGHTHOUSES: BOSTON, Dec. 25.—(AP)—Santa Claus came today to 70 lonely lighthouses along the New England coast from Boston to Monhegan island—off the coast of northeastern Maine.

This particular Santa Claus' other name is Captain "Bill" Wincupaw, widely-known New England aviator. He, and four others, flew in a big seaplane hundreds of miles through frigid, howling winds, to bring a bit of cheer to those who spend their lives safeguarding others.

At each station was dropped a package containing newspapers, magazines, and a pound of fresh coffee—the gift of Odriel Bird, of Boston.

Bird, himself sponsoring the flight, accompanied Wincupaw, Wincupaw's son, Bill Jr., George Mason and Gerald Olack.

Mrs. H. H. Harris, the boy's mother, was reported to be in a state of collapse owing to the intense strain of awaiting news of her son and the blow of his death.

Mr. Harris, a vice president of Home Stores, Inc., had offered a "liberal reward" for information leading to his son's return and said earlier today he would "give anything" for his safety.

FORMER PRESIDENT RECEIVES LINES FROM ALL OVER WORLD

PALO ALTO, Cal., Dec. 25.—(AP) While telegrams and messages in the steady stream brought greetings today to a former president from all parts of the world, the Herbert Hoover household celebrated Christmas in their family home at San Juan Hill.

As in millions of homes over the land, the rooms of the big house echoed with the delighted shouts of children, exclaiming over gifts in their stockings first and then the tree sparkling in the dining room. There were dolls and buggies, mechanical

Before transportation sped up, residents of upper California—there really are two villages—visited residents of Lower Rodanthe, on December 25, and on January 5, the visit would be repaid. The exchange of visits varied first section visiting the other and then the other paying the first visit.

Now, however, the villagers have reversed the custom and today was merely December 25, as they waited for their real Christmas Day.

FEAST OF FROZEN REINDEER ENJOYED AT POINT BARROW: POINT BARROW, Alaska, Dec. 25.—(AP)—Borealis Christmas today found the Eskimos overcoming their depression with a Yuletide spirit that expressed itself in ways strange to the people of warmer climates.

There was a great Christmas banquet today, a feast of frozen reindeer and fish, followed by Eskimo ice cream, a rare delicacy made of whale oil and reindeer tallow, whipped to a froth. For dessert there was the frozen marrow of reindeer bones. Each Eskimo brought his share, and the white men furnished the sugar and tea.

The elder Eskimos exchanged the conventional presents—sealskin boots, seals, reindeer sinews, large frozen fish and such articles.

The children held their school program, directed by teachers sent by Uncle Sam to this, the farthest point north under the American flag.

HITLER SHARES CHRISTMAS WITH TWO HITCHHIKERS: MUNICH, Germany, Dec. 25.—(AP) Chancellor Adolf Hitler turned unexpected Santa Claus today. En route to his mountain home at Berchtesgaden, he stopped for him after he was picked up a 20-mile ride in his automobile.

Removing his two overcoats—one his conspicuous white trench coat—he presented to each hiker a garment, together with five marks.

One blue candle among the traditional white candles burning on each German Christmas tree lighted the holiday in many homes of the reich "in memory of our German brethren outside our borders."

W. W. STEWART DIES AT COLUMBUS

Physician Succumbs After Long Illness; Funeral Wednesday.

COLUMBUS, Ga., Dec. 25.—Dr. William W. Stewart, for many years one of southwest Georgia's most prominent physicians, died at his home here Sunday night after a long illness.

Funeral services will be conducted from the Trinity Episcopal church here at 11 o'clock Wednesday morning and interment will be in the Lincoln cemetery.

Dr. Stewart was a native of Columbus. He was a graduate of the Bellevue Hospital in New York, and practiced in New York city for several years prior to his return to Columbus.

In New York, he married Miss Euphonia Collier, sister of Barron C. Collier of New York.

Dr. Stewart had been practicing in Columbus since 1891, and was widely known.

In addition to his wife, the former Miss Collier, he is survived by two sons, Edward Stewart, of Columbus, and Myles Stewart, of San Antonio, Texas; a sister, Mrs. G. M. Bowers, of Birmingham, Ala.; and a sister-in-law, Mrs. Edward Comer, of Savannah.

toys, airplanes and other playthings of every kind.

Center of all interest were 8-year-old Peggy Ann, Peter, 6, and little Joan 3-1/2, children of Herbert Hoover Jr., who came north with their father and mother to spend the very first Christmas they have ever known as the Herbert Hoover Sr.'s, own home on the Stanford University campus here.

RODANTHE AWAITS JANUARY 5 TO CELEBRATE 'CHRISTMAS': RODANTHE, N. C., Dec. 25.—(AP) Most of the world celebrated Christmas today but in this outer bank village off the coast of North Carolina natives wait about their business waiting for January 5—old Christmas.

Villagers since the time of the settlement was founded have observed January 5 as Christmas instead of today. It was the custom before the present generation and the custom before that.

A few of the younger folk who follow the modern trend declared the day one of celebration, but the older ones adhere to tradition and will wait for the day next month when they will lay aside their native exchange presents and listen to a Christmas sermon.

Roosevelt's Advisor Is Named In List of Monetary Experts

NEW YORK, Dec. 25.—(AP)—Professor Irving Fisher's list of men "who understand the real meaning of money" was published today.

Prominent in the list is Professor George Warren, of Cornell, monetary advisor to the president.

Only 19 are named.

In a letter to E. C. Riegel, president of the Consumers' Guild of America, the Yale economist said "there are doubtless several others whose names do not happen to occur to me just now, as well as others especially among younger economists whom I do not even know. There are also some business leaders."

The list gives these names: Professor Harry G. Brown, University of Missouri.

Professor Warren.

Professor E. A. Pearson, of Cornell University.

Professor J. Harvey Rogers, of Yale.

Professor Willford I. King, of New York University.

Professor John R. Commons, University of Wisconsin.

Dr. Warren M. Persons, of New York.

Professor Edwin M. Kemmerer, of Princeton.

Professor Cyril James, University of Pennsylvania.

ACCIDENTS AND VIOLENCE KILL 22 IN CAROLINAS

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Dec. 25.—(AP) Accidents and violence took 22 lives in North and South Carolina during Christmas week-end and a man, still was missing.

North Carolina recorded 13 deaths while South Carolina had nine. Sixteen died in automobile accidents, one by the accidental discharge of a gun, three were slain in fights and one man was found killed in a woods near his home.

A search was still under way for Herbert H. Harris Jr., who disappeared Saturday from his Columbus, Ga., home on his 15th birthday and police feared he had been kidnapped. They admitted, however, they had no basis for their belief. The boy is the son of a chain grocery store official.

At Charlotte, Bruce D. Whitehead, 28-year-old insurance man, still was missing after disappearing from his office Wednesday. Relatives were at a loss to explain his absence.

all get here. Indications are that efforts to avoid any possible major conflict will be made by the president before he submits his proposals to congress.

One phase of the presidential program that is an ever-present potential source of trouble is the economy act, with its sharply reduced gratuities to veterans. Veterans' organizations are demanding modification if not repeal of its major provisions. Some leaders predict the administration will restore some of the benefits.

N. Y. YOUTH LEAVES HIS 'IRON LUNGS' FOR YULE PARTY

BEACON, N. Y., Dec. 25.—(AP)—For his holiday hours today Birdsell Sweet, 15 years old, came back home and left his "iron lung" behind in Poughkeepsie.

Birdsell had a Christmas tree, turkey, presents and everything—and then when back to the Yassar hospital where he has spent most of the past 27 months in an artificial respirator.

He arrived at his home in an ambulance, opened his Christmas presents stacked by his Christmas tree, consumed the largest meal he has had since 1931, including turkey and all the fixins, played host to hundreds of neighborhood visitors and finally went back to the hospital and his "iron lung."

He's the town's candidate for the nation's happiest youngster today.

BENEFITS OF C. C. C. TOLD BY FECHNER

Conservation Director Reports Lasting Benefits Given by Work.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 25.—(AP)—Manpower massed in the civilian conservation corps has wrought lasting benefits for future generations in millions of acres of the nation's timbered domain, Robert Fechner, director of emergency conservation work, reported today to President Roosevelt.

The forestry army is engaged in 60 different lines of activity, Fechner said in a report on the first six months' activity of his organization, but the great bulk of field operations "have been directed toward fire-proofing the forests to the greatest possible extent, the protection of the forests from tree attacking insects and diseases which annually kill millions of valuable trees, the prevention of soil erosion, which government experts state annually cause losses running into hundreds of millions of dollars and the improvement of park areas for recreational use."

Turning to actual figures, the director showed that the 300,000 men under his command spent 400,000 man-days fighting forest fires, planted trees on about 25,000 acres and started plantations on 50,000 more, completed disease control work on 1,675,000 acres, and forest control work on another 3,568,918.

More than 800,000 acres were subjected to pest control operations, and 47,450 were gone over to eradicate poisonous plants. Workers constructed 12,671 miles of trails, 4,229 bridges and 68,000 small erosion dams.

The report, which included the accomplishments of 5,000 Indians in Indian conservation camps, said the benefits were not confined to the forest areas actually worked but extended also to millions of acres of adjoining land.

"Improvements done by the CCC and the Indians," Fechner asserted, "will prove of permanent value to the nation. The forest resources of the nation have been given new and valuable protection from fire, pests and disease which in the past have taken an annual toll estimated in the hundreds of millions of dollars."

"Standards of timber have been improved, erosion of land checked, ranges for the great livestock industry improved and recreational facilities for the public multiplied. The value of our national and state forests and our national parks has been greatly enhanced."

Fechner said he was informed by F. A. Silcox, of the department of agriculture's forest service, that fire losses in national forests were more than half during the first 10 months of 1933 largely through efforts of the CCC. From Arno B. Cammerer, director of the office of national parks, buildings and reservations, he received word that the corps was the main influence in a reduction of 37 per cent in forest fire loss in national parks under the first 10 months of last year.

"Improvements admittedly required for years, but impossible of entire achievement for 10 or 20 years in the past, have been accomplished and are in the process of accomplishment," Fechner said. "As a result, generations to come will derive social benefits from our great recreational areas almost undreamed of when these reservations were established."

Most of the work was accomplished in July, August and September, he explained. His report covered no operations after September 30.

2 MEN HELD IN JAIL IN DEATH OF GIRL, 18

HASTINGS-ON-HUDSON, N. Y., Dec. 25.—(AP)—Two men were held on suspicion tonight in the murder of 18-year-old Josephine Waropay, the daughter of a Polish laborer, whose body was found Sunday under the back porch of the St. Matthews lighthouse.

Police said one of the men, Sebastian Martins, 40, had frequently annoyed children in the Polish quarter in this Hudson river suburb of New York. The other, Harry Fuly, 45, was described by police as a "bad actor."

Jewish Butcher Jailed For Observing Ritual

WIESBADEN, Germany, Dec. 25.—(UP)—Ludwig Frohwein, a Jewish butcher, was sentenced to two months' imprisonment today on charges that he went through the Jewish ritual in butchering beef—a ritual banned since April 21, under the anti-Jewish Hitlerite regime in the reich.

The judge said the butcher had committed a grave offense by observing the "foreign law," namely, the Talmud, in preference to German law.

BAR ASSOCIATION RAPS JUSTICE IN NEW YORK

Courts Years Behind in Many Places, Letter to Governor Says.

NEW YORK, Dec. 25.—(AP)—A resolution protesting legal delays in New York courts and requesting emergency legislation to enable speedy trials was forwarded today to Governor Herbert Lehman by the Federal Bar Association of New York, New Jersey and Connecticut.

"The standard of public justice in the city of New York has fallen very, very low and continues to get worse," the governor was informed by an accompanying letter written by Henry Ward Beer, president of the association.

The resolution, adopted at a special meeting of the association's committee against the law's delay, declared that the "law's delay is tantamount to a denial of justice and imposes severe hardships on litigants."

Beer wrote that as an "example" the city court of Brooklyn has "more than 22,000 cases awaiting jury trial."

"If it does not receive another case, it will take over four years for it to clean up its calendar," Beer wrote.

"The city of Manhattan, with its few judges, is no less than 9,000 cases late to date. The supreme court in New York county is 14,000 cases late to date. Westchester county is four years late, not to mention the deplorable state of justice in our many municipal courts.

"It is no exaggeration to say that more than 500,000 men, women and children are now the innocent victims of the state's neglect."

LEGION SEEKS CHANGE IN ECONOMY MEASURE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 25.—(AP)—An aggressive drive for modification of the national economy act as it affects veterans' expenditures is taking shape for the coming session of congress.

With most former service men's organizations working for repeal of the act, the American Legion is pushing a four-point modification program. Its amendments will be presented on the first day of the session by Representative Rankin, democrat, Mississippi, chairman of the house veterans' committee.

Adoption of the program, according to Legion estimates, would cost $70,000,000. It would restore free hospitalization to improvident veterans; would substitute the word "compensation" for "pension" with reference to service-connected death and disability payments; would return the compensation for World War death and disability to persons who received it on March 20, 1933, on the old basis and would provide payments for World War orphans and widows.

Harvey's Restaurant Provides Christmas For Hundreds of Atlanta's Needy

Three men as they enjoyed a Christmas dinner at Harvey's restaurant Monday, when turkey, potatoes, cranberries and all the fixings were served to 200 people. Sam Dardarian, owner of Harvey's restaurant, is standing at the left with Miss Doris Caliss, waitress. Staff photo.

The lame, the halt and the needy came to a Christmas party given by Harvey's Restaurant Monday to partake of some of the good things of the season.

There were men who had not had a square meal in days and there were women who perhaps had not had a square meal in many days—but they came with all the fervor of those anxious souls who desired the goodness of nature. They came, 200 strong, to enjoy the bounty of a turkey dinner with all the "fixings." There was a sweetness of giving that was a new note in the symphony of Christmas cheer—a lot of filled stomachs and the well-being of life that followed. There was a generosity of cheer that only food can give.

One "customer" was an old man, a man who had known better days. That was plain. There was another, an old lady, a woman who must have known plenty in other times.

But Monday they were all the same—people come to enjoy a Christmas dinner donated by another.

And it was a Christmas for them, these people with no means what Sam Dardarian, owner of Harvey's Restaurant, handed out the best of food. They came to enjoy turkey, dressing, string beans, potatoes, cranberries and other things with the host.

$5,000 COST OF CARE DURING PAST YEAR FOR SLEEPING GIRL

OAK PARK, Ill., Dec. 25.—(AP)—It has cost more than $5,000 to keep Miss Patricia Maguire, Oak Park's "sleeping beauty," in food and medical supplies the past 12 months.

This estimate was made today by relatives of the young woman who failed to wake up on February 24, 1932, a victim of a form of sleeping sickness and who was still slumbering today, despite recent stirrings which were taken as an indication that she may be about to awaken.

During the past year Patricia has had 160 dozen eggs; 91 gallons and one quart of cream; 106 gallons and one quart of milk; 164 1/2 dozen oranges; five pounds of powdered yeast; three gallons of cod liver oil and three gallons of mineral oil.

Prior to the time she was given solid food Miss Maguire received a thousand nasal feedings.

FOUR VACANCIES EXIST IN U. S. FOREIGN SERVICE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 25.—(AP)—The United States has only four vacancies in the American foreign service and at least two of them are expected to be filled about the time the new year rolls around.

Until President Roosevelt nominates ministers to fill the vacant posts, the United States is not represented with ministers to the Netherlands, Czechoslovakia, El Salvador and Liberia.

State department sources expect him to fill the vacancy at The Hague caused by the resignation of Laurits S. Swenson, of Minnesota, within a few days. It is understood that the name of a New York attorney—not yet further identified for publication—has already been sent to The Hague for approval by the Netherlands government. Hallett Johnson, of New Jersey, is charge d'affaires at The Hague pending the appointment.

A DARLING PEPLUM BLOUSE.

For general hard wear, a soft wool and crepe silk novelty in black and white as sketched is most attractive. Then, there are delightful hairy woolsens in checks and plaids, the silk in regimental stripes and dark shades as wine red, brown, light navy, bottle green, etc., in crepe silk, also practical for ordinary daytime occasions.

For daintier wear, coppery flamed velvet, silver lame or lighter shades in crepe silk or crepe satin as turquoise blue, bois de rose, almond green, gold, etc., would be divinely beautiful.

Style No. 362 is designed in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20 years, 28, 32 and 40 inches bust. Size 16 requires 2 3/8 yards of 36-inch material.

HOUSEHOLD ARTS

Quaint crinoline days! How decorative the clothes—even the men's clothes—seemed at that time! Here are some lovely cross-stitch silhouettes. Haven't they all the quaint decorative touch of that period? And they are just as much fun to do as they are charming to look at. The wreath and other floral touches are done in such simple stitches as lazy-daisy, French knots and rambler-rose—a very easy stitch. The two larger motifs would make a charming pair.

In pattern 5020 you will find the two larger motifs, which are 6x9 inches and the two smaller ones which are 5 1/4 by 6 inches; illustrated instructions for making the stitches and suggestions for color schemes for the motifs. Price of pattern, 10 cents.

SCHOOLS' OUTLOOK FOR YEAR IS 'DARK,' SAYS U. S. SURVEY

WASHINGTON, Dec. 25.—(AP)—A generally "dark" picture for city educational institutions for the current school year, balanced only slightly by "some bright spots" in national education, was reported tonight by Dr. George F. Zook, commissioner of education.

From his latest survey of city schools and the effect upon them of the economic depression, Dr. Zook concluded conditions had grown increasingly difficult for them.

He noted as "outstanding facts" from reports from city schools their operation with 18,000 fewer teachers than in 1930; a probable increased enrollment of 250,000 more students than in 1930 and an approximate cut of $133,000,000 in the outlay for current expenses compared with 1931-32.

"Few school buildings are being built," he said. "Few old ones have been repaired. The school term has been reduced in length in one out of every four cities. . . . Night and adult classes were reduced or eliminated in 113 cities out of 266. Summer schools were seriously affected in 99 cities of 240."

BROADER BASE SEEN ON COMPETITIVE CURB

WASHINGTON, Dec. 25.—(AP)—Treaty curbs on unfair competition in world trade may be broadened at the international industrial property conference, meeting in London next May to revise the pact on industrial property signed at The Hague in 1925.

Recommendation has been made that the treaty be amended to prohibit "all manner of acts of such nature as to create confusion by any means whatsoever with the business, products or services of a competitor," and "all manner of acts, in the course of trade, of such a nature as to cause injury to the good-will of another's business; in particular, false allegations of a nature to disparage a competitor, his goods or his business."

Her parents refused to comment and the Drexel mansion, usually the scene of holiday social affairs, was empty of visitors.

"I saw a path that looked interesting and I went exploring," Miss Drexel told friends. "Suddenly realizing I was alone, I screamed, and when no one came, I wandered blindly on and passed the night in a cave. I don't remember much after that."

She was found by a volunteer searching party, exhausted and suffering from exposure.

GUARANTY TRUST RAPS DEPOSIT INSURANCE

New York Company Says Situation Charged With Grave Possibilities.

NEW YORK, Dec. 25.—(AP)—The federal deposit insurance law guaranteeing bank deposits up to $2,500 for the first six months of 1934 and larger amounts after that time, is described in the monthly review of the Guaranty Trust Company as "charged with grave possibilities to the entire American banking system."

The temporary plan, which will be effective from January 1 to July 1, is held by the bank to be "harmless" compared to the permanent plan with its higher bracket of deposit guarantees. Under the permanent plan, the bank says, "whenever more money is needed to replenish the guaranty fund, assessments must be levied on all participating banks; and no limitation is placed on the total amount of such assessments or the frequency with which they shall be made. Thus, every participating bank will assume an unpredictable liability."

The review calls the term "insurance" of deposits a misnomer in that the cost of it is to be borne by the banks which rank equally in the plan irrespective of strength, whereas in the ordinary sense the term "insurance" is based on fixed and limited premiums payments, "which are related to the specific risks and the cost is borne by the insured."

The review says unification of the banking system under federal laws would not necessarily provide for a solution of the banking problems as they exist today, but would merely "be a means to an end."

SUSPECT IS HUNTED IN MURDER OF GIRL

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Dec. 25.—(AP)—Sheriff Fred Kelley announced today he had sent out a request for the arrest of William McCann, 20, for questioning in connection with the slaying of Miss Margaret Feevey, 22-year-old deaf mute.

The sheriff said he had learned that McCann, a former sweetheart of the young woman's, had quarreled with her some time ago. Yesterday, the sheriff said, McCann visited his mother and disappeared after obtaining a sum of money from her.

TWO VIOLENT DEATHS MAR JUAREZ HOLIDAY

JUAREZ, Mex., Dec. 25.—(AP)—Juarez police today were faced with two death mysteries which climaxed a week of violence in this northern Mexican city.

Manuel Alcantar, 30, Juarez, policeman, died today from wounds received in a saloon last night when he attempted to subdue a Christmas celebration.

The body of Simon Corral, whom Chief Gallardo described as a dealer in narcotics, was found with bullet wounds in the head south of here today.

INDIANA GOVERNOR TO SPEAK AT TAMPA

TAMPA, Fla., Dec. 25.—(AP)—Governor Paul V. McNutt, of Indiana, will be principal speaker at a state mass meeting, sponsored by the Florida department of the American Legion, here December 28.

McNutt's subject will be "The American School System." In announcing the meeting, Joe S. Clark, department commander of the Legion, said it was the first of a series of meetings in the state to discuss schools.

BANDIT IS KILLED IN HOLDUP EFFORT

DETROIT, Dec. 25.—(AP)—A bandit who was fatally wounded in an unsuccessful attempt to hold up a gasoline filling station Saturday night was said by Major M. E. Taves, of the police fingerprint bureau today to be Ted Patterson, alias Ted J. Pollock, wanted for questioning in connection with a bank robbery in Des Moines, Iowa, June 12, last.

Boy of 16 Is Accused In Death of Lad, 11

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark., Dec. 25.—(AP)—Before he died in a hospital here late yesterday of gunshot wounds, Wallace Shores, 11, told police that he was shot by DeRoss Bailey, 16, because he refused to give the older boy a small knife as a Christmas present.

Shores, who summoned an ambulance for the dying boy told police the shooting was accidental. No formal charges have been filed.

THE COTTON CAMPAIGN.

The announcement by Farm Administration Administrator Chester C. Davis that the cotton reduction sign-up campaign will begin January 1 finds the farmers of Georgia already being lined up to co-operate in the movement, as a result of the farmer-banker meetings held throughout the state last week.

Five meetings were staged in as many sections of the state by the agricultural committee of the Georgia Bankers' Association and the more than 2,500 farmers who attended them were a unit in pledging their assistance in holding down production during 1934 through the sharp curtailment of acreage.

Contracts have already been sent to each cotton-producing state and organizations effected covering each county, and the signing of these contracts by farmers will be gotten under way with the beginning of the new year.

These contracts call for rental payments on land taken out of cotton production on the basis of 34 cents per pound on the average of lint cotton produced on the land, during the years from 1929 to 1932. On this basis a farmer taking out of cultivation an acre of land on which he has averaged a half bale of cotton will receive from the government a rental of $9.75—which will represent that much profit to the farmer, since he will save all expenses of planting, cultivation, picking and baling. It represents a profit of practically $20 a bale, margin much larger than the average of the past 10 years.

A farmer who has averaged a half bale an acre on a 10-acre farm would be able to plant these acres in food crops for his family and his stock and receive $97.50 cash with which to buy such things as he could not produce.

In outlining the plans for curtailment production of cotton this year, Administrator Davis predicts that "if all cotton farmers participate and actually restrict planting next year to 25,000,000 acres," the surplus which has kept down prices will be wiped out.

The cotton farmers have been vastly benefited by the plowing up campaign of the past summer, despite the fact that a bumper crop on the remaining acreage resulted in but little, if any, reduction in the supply of hold-over cotton. With these benefits in mind, it is but reasonable to expect that the campaign of the government to even more sharply reduce cotton acreage this year should receive the earnest co-operation of the producers.

If it does, there can be no doubt that next fall will see cotton sold at the highest prices in years, and the farmers well supplied with money as the result of the profits in these higher prices and the rentals received by the government.

A ROMANOFF MYSTERY.

Another chapter is added to the numerous mysteries and unexplained episodes in the weird history of the Romanoff family of Russia in the latest explanation of why the tomb of Alexander I, czar of all the Russias, was found empty when opened in 1918 by the bolsheviks in search of treasure.

According to the claims of a Polish scientist, a secret correspondence of Alexander, conducted over a period of 25 years after the supposed date of his death, has been discovered in a deserted monastery. These documents seem to definitely prove that Alexander died not, as history records, in 1825, but that he merely abdicated and disappeared.

The secret archives show that the czar, under the name of Fedor Kousmitch, spent the quarter of a century following his disappearance in a remote monastery in Siberia, during which he maintained a continuous correspondence with the Vatican.

While still czar, Alexander had made the acquaintance of several Roman Catholic dignitaries. Religiously inclined, he is supposed to have abdicated to devote himself to an effort to end the schism between the eastern orthodox church and the church of Rome, an endeavor which, the newly discovered documents prove, he continued until the time of his death in 1850.

The documents are said to contain, in addition, the amazing revelation that Czar Paul I was not the child of Catherine II. They relate that Catherine's child died at the tender age of five and a substitution of children took place. If this is true, then the subsequent line of Russian rulers were not descendants of Peter the Great and, in all probability, were not Romanoffs at all.

This might explain why the Russian czars, who were among Europe's most dominant rulers before the time of Paul I, were, after his death, of the weak-kneed and vacillating type of Czar Nicholas II, whose life was snuffed out by the bolsheviks.

The alleged revelations in the newly discovered documents are, at least, in keeping with the contradictory record of cruel brilliance, religious fervor and mysticism of the Romanoffs. They are not different from other revelations of past centuries which have torn the veil of secrecy from happenings during the reign of many of the amazing rulers of imperial Russia.

CANAL PROSPECTS BRIGHT.

Reports in the United States News, of Washington, reveal that prospects are increasingly bright for the construction of the proposed canal from the Atlantic ocean across south Georgia and north Florida to the Gulf of Mexico.

According to this periodical, which is devoted to non-partisan reporting of the news of the national government, "President Roosevelt is favorable to the plan, but the department of war will have to resurvey the project and present an estimate of cost that will make the canal self-liquidating if it is to be built."

Complete study of the cost of the canal, both as a barge waterway and a full-sized ship's canal, and of the normal revenue that could be expected, have proven conclusively that the project would pay for itself in a reasonable length of time.

Such inland waterways as the Erie and Hudson canals have long since paid for their construction and are now open to traffic free of charge except for nominal maintenance costs.

If such waterways can pay for their construction, the proposed Georgia-Florida canal, cutting a thousand miles from the trip from the gulf ports to the east can be expected to liquidate its cost in a shorter time. None of the inland canals offer the saving in time or expense that will be offered by the Georgia-Florida project, and the latter, if constructed, would carry a far heavier tonnage.

There can be no questioning the soundness of the project from a business standpoint, and the war department, which it is understood is making the survey wanted by the president, can hardly fail to bring in a favorable report. In that event, the report of the Washington paper clearly indicates that the project will be sanctioned.

Balkan Revival.

While I am visiting here important things are passing in the political field. The king of Bulgaria is visiting the king of Yugoslavia. What this means you may imagine when I tell you that on the frontier of the two countries thick barriers of barbed wire are still in evidence and military posts and machine guns in little concrete towers, in fact, two armies standing opposite each other, ready any minute to go to it. Yugoslavia is France's ally. Bulgaria of late was slowly coming under the influence of Italy. That's finished now. Bulgaria is swinging in the direction of the Little Entente.

Conversations are going on between the statesmen of the various Balkan countries, including Turkey, to revive the great French system. This means a reinforcement of the powers who are opposed to treaty revision, and is a direct affront to Germany and Italy who are the sponsors of an idea to bring about a new division of Europe. Yet, at that, treaty revision will have to come some day. But it must come by negotiation and conference, not by the imposition of the will of one or two major governments or dictators.

How would Hitler and Mussolini divide Europe? Would a just settlement come from their side? If the Duce is animated by a sense of justice, a good way to start would be to give back the Tyrol to Austria, the Tyrol which the Hungarians and Germans are systematically being denationalized to the extent even that they have had to change their names and adopt Italian names, while it is forbidden to the children to speak their own mother tongue. The fate of the Tyrolese does not augur well for what Italy has in mind when it talks of treaty revision.

If the Duce is animated by a sense of justice, a good way to start would be to give back the Tyrol to Austria, the Tyrol which the Hungarians and Germans are systematically being denationalized to the extent even that they have had to change their names and adopt Italian names, while it is forbidden to the children to speak their own mother tongue. The fate of the Tyrolese does not augur well for what Italy has in mind when it talks of treaty revision.

BLOOD MONEY

INSTALLMENT II.

The younger policeman led the way as we single-filed up the boxed-in stairs and along a short, narrow cross-passage to the big chamber on the upper level. I heard the chief suck in his breath with a sort of horrified gasp as he stepped into the room beyond, and on the rug under him. His legs were stretched out in front of him like a pair of extended calipers, and his arms were dangling over the arms of the chair, so that his fingers almost touched the floor. His torso had a strange cavelin look to it so that his clothing seemed overly large for him. In the front center of his high build, just above and between the eyes, was a wound, not very large. The cut ran up and down; even though the blood oozing from it seemed to tell that much. From the collapsed posture and all, it was easily to be deduced that he had died eling, so that his body just slumped down into the scoop of the chair and remained fixed there.

The second body was that of Wong Gee, the butler. He was tautly arched, face upward, across the farther end of a broad, low couch, which stood out at an angle from the left wall to the middle breadth of the room. The slumped feet of the Chinaman were on the floor on one side of the couch. The back of his head touched against the floor on the other side of the couch. The skinny, fragile-looking hands convulsively were clenched on the breast. The neck was strained rigidly back until the Adam's apple seemed ready to burst through the stretched and corded skin. The face was swollen and frightfully discolored, but not apparently from outward bruises—from congestion. The expression on that mottled, yellow-gray face was no pleasant thing to look upon.

I saw how Dr. Finch had just one swift scrutiny for the crumpled form in the chair. Then he stepped over and stooped by the second body, lightly fingering the distorted throat and the eyeballs but not disturbing the agonized position of the body.

From where I had halted just over the threshold, without drawing any nearer to these lived shapes, I had seen enough and more than enough. I said: "I'll be waiting below," and I left the three of them and turned around and went downstairs.

I went downstairs and I went around the left side of the bathhouse and sat down on a bench so placed as to run parallel with the top of the little sloped ramp upon which boats are drawn back and forth. It was a gorgeous fall morning—a red-and-yellow bouquet right out of the heart of Indian summer, the air almost balmy enough for summer, the leaves all shades, a kind of intangible soft pollen like a glow of floating gold dust over everything.

All this autumnal beauty here, and up above in the bespattered room—that! In my time as a newspaper man I have covered many a morbid and mussy assignment. I have had much acquaintance with murders and some acquaintance with murderers, and I have looked, often the time upon a murderer's lethal leavings. But today I found out this much: Murder when it comes home to you, when it claims one you have known all through your life, when it comes to you in the scope and orbit of it, is vastly different from any murder you read about in a fiction tale or in a newspaper. As that Englishwoman, Mrs. Belloc Lowndes put it, murder is the one chink in the armor of civilization for which no provision is ever made.

The news must have spread fast. After awhile—perhaps 20 minutes, perhaps as long as half an hour—I was aware of the coming of the first members of what was to prove quite a crowd. In a broken trickle which presently swelled to a stream, townspeople began approaching by way of the private by-road. From behind my corner of the bathhouse I could see these intruders although as yet none of them apparently saw me. Little Bouthby, the editor of the local weekly, bustled up wearing an almost comic air of importance.

Dr. Finch edged along the north side of the bathhouse and took a seat on my bench. He must have guessed this was where he would be likely to find me. In his quiet way he is a very canny and observant person. He is a small man and dapper, with quick, competent movements.

"A tolerably nasty layout upstairs," Mr. Redd, he said.

"What do you make of it?" I said.

"There's only one thing I can make of it. Offhand, I'd say both of 'em have been dead somewhere between six and twelve hours. For the sake of the argument I'll compromise and say they've been dead nine hours, more or less. All right then, here's how I'd reconstruct this thing, fitting in my own pet notions as I've just now framed it, to match with the physical setting and all: Uncas Cresap is sitting there by the desk diagonally in front of his fireplace. He has taken off his coat and vest. He's wearing a dressing gown. Maybe he has been writing, maybe reading. Or maybe he's just sitting a spell before he turns in."

"He occasionally slept here instead of going back to the house, I know that," I told him. "I believe that sofa arrangement is one of these day beds, as they call them, and when he renovated the upstairs of this building he put in a bathroom."

"Precisely. Well, we'll agree then that he died while sitting up. Somebody knows he was walking in by the only way a person can walk in—and that's through the door leading him. He must know the other person, otherwise he would get up or, if he thought he was in danger of being molested, make some move to protect himself. Well, this somebody walks up to him and probably goes on past him, still without causing him any alarm, and turns crosswise and stops behind him and lets him have it right through the skull and on into the brain, with a weapon that's been hidden until that moment—some kind of slender, sharp-edged cutting implement such as a hatchet or a narrow-bladed ax or even a very broad chisel.

"The murderer can tell instantly that the job is done. So, unless his object was to steal something—though from the looks of the place nothing appears to be disturbed—he beats it then, taking his implement with him. I looked around and I didn't see hide nor hide anything answering to the vague description of it as I've built it up in my mind from a cursory examination of the wound. Well, a little while later, he probably not very much later, that tottery old living skeleton of a Chinaman comes up those steps and turns the electric lights on, assuming, you see, that the murderer turned the lights off before he left. Or maybe he left them burning. They're burning now. Be that as it may, the Chinaman comes paddling in. He comes in and all of a sudden he sees what's happened to his boss. He takes one look and being old and pretty shaky—"

"He hit the pipe—that's an admitted fact in this weird household," I put in.

"So I'd have suspected myself," conceded Dr. Finch. "He's got opium addict written all over him—skin, cadaverous frame, everything. That being the case, it makes the hypothesis better than ever. . . . This feeble old shell of a Chin takes one look and over he keels across that mantelpiece. The way he falls, his head is dangling down until it brushed the floor, and either he dies of a heart attack right there or else the whole business rushes to his brain and apoplexy gets him."

"And so, if you're asking me, that's how it all was. . . . Well, Mr. Redd, you've heard my ideas and if anybody's got a set of better ones I'd be glad to hear what they are."

"For one, I'm not prepared up to now to quarrel with your conclusions," said Dr. Finch. "I didn't take a very close survey of the room—I'll have to confess I felt a little bit squeamish—but from what I did see, I think I'd probably say what you've just said. Of course neither of us is taking into consideration any imaginable reason that any individual might have for wanting to put Uncas Cresap out of the way, even conceding that he was not greatly beloved."

"Not many people up and assassinate an elderly, helpless man merely on the grounds of his being unpopular," said Dr. Finch. "You might get a craving to kill such a one if thrown with him much, but the average normal person wouldn't give way to the craving. Besides, if I'm one to say, this killing wasn't done in sudden heat and passion. I'd say it was premeditated, worked out in advance."

"Well," I said. "I don't know so well about all that. It has been my observation—and once upon a time, doctor, I had plenty of chances to observe—that as a rule a planned and calculated killing is accomplished by other means than the effective but rather crude means used here; by poison, say, which is more subtle, or by a pistol, which is cleaner, or by a knife stab, which usually is surer. Of course there are exceptions to all rules. I'm just generalizing."

About that time a poor defective known by the cruelly appropriate name of Fifield Jack supplied the crowd at the front with a supplemental diversion by falling down in one of his spasms. Dr. Finch went to give the sufferer aid, and I took advantage of the opportunity to cut across the turf to the rear of the big house.

I invaded Uncas Cresap's late place of residence by way of the service entry. There was nobody in the kitchen or the pantry or the laundry, and the servants' dining alcove likewise was deserted. A litter of unwashed china was strewn over the table and bits of cold food on the platters made a greasy smear on the air. Almost it was as though the entire household had been massacred so nearby already brooded over what ordinarily was the busiest end of this establishment.

The illusion of exploring a wing of a haunted house vanished when I emerged into the breakfast porch and came upon the survivors of the domestic staff. I found them sitting, almost motionless, in a sort of nervous and uneasy silence. Delia the cook, that pious and acid minded woman, had a rosary in her fingers and evidently had been saying her prayers, but she was through the swinging doors she left off and lifted her bewildered and unhappy eyes to mine. The two maids were holding their breath for the comfort of physical contact.

Hawley Verity, the general factotum, and Olson, the chauffeur, were opposite the girls on the farther side of the table from them. The Swede's frowning expression, as I read it, seemed so much frightened as puzzled, but old Verity's seamed and weather-beaten face was downright haggard, from shock though rather than any real grief; or at least so I interpreted his look. The most detached member of the party—and by that I mean not only bodily but mentally detached—was Sabino, the dwarf, who stood by himself alongside a window with his back to the wainscoting as though he meant not to be taken by surprise, and he was wearing his customary hostile scowl. There was something belligerent about the spraddle of his absurdly short legs, about the jumble of his folded arms across his breast.

Roosevelt Hails Patients, Citizens Celebrating Xmas at Warm Springs

WARM SPRINGS, Ga., Dec. 25.—(P)—Patients at the Warm Springs Foundation and residents of this Georgia town, the southern home of President Roosevelt, observed Christmas Day quietly with a special message from the nation's chief executive and a community Christmas tree this afternoon.

The president wished the patients and the staff of the foundation, a merry Christmas in a message which was not made public.

Celebration of the Christmas holiday started late yesterday with a children's party. A group of patients and their friends formed a choir and sang carols. Several of the children took part in a pageant depicting scenes of the Nativity.

The climax of Christmas came this afternoon when everybody gathered around a tree to receive their presents from Santa Claus. The patients and their relatives and friends and others in Warm Springs received gifts.

The Rev. Louis D. Newton, pastor of the Druid Hills Baptist church, Atlanta, conducted the Christmas services in Georgia Hall this morning.

Mrs. Edwin Byrd and Mrs. Gerald Mitchell, both of Atlanta, sang at this service. At noon Christmas dinner, with all the turkey and trimmings, was served in Georgia Hall.

And, oh yes—the children at the foundation hung up their stockings last night and woke this morning to find that Santa had filled them with nuts and fruits.

Watch out for the hazards of winter but also try to avoid low resistance!

You can't go out in bad weather unprotected. People who take foolish chances usually pay for it in illness.

But outward precautions, you'll find, are not always enough to keep you well. It's necessary also to have good resistance!

The time to build up your natural forces is before you take sick. The body should be encouraged to use its own defenses as protection against illness.

One way of helping to do this is to obtain certain factors needed every day for good resistance—Vitamins A and D.

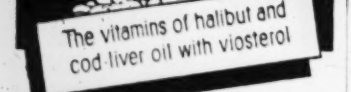

These factors, so essential for building-up, are abundantly provided by halibut and cod-liver oils with Viosterol.

But people who do not care to take the oils may obtain them in concentrate form—Squibb Adex Tablets—10 D.

Squibb Adex tablets offer the only means of obtaining the vitamins from all three of these health-giving sources.

Moreover, they are protected by a patented process against deterioration. You can always depend on them for results!

Why not start before your usual illness begins? Take them regularly every day. Be sure to insist on Adex. At any good drug store.

On the Air Today

FIRESIDE—A medley of favorite songs of health and home will be the highlight of Glen Gray's Casa Loma orchestra performance while warm-voiced Gene Taylor will contribute "I Just Couldn't Take It Baby" to the Camel Caravan broadcast over the Columbia network and WGST this evening at 9 o'clock.

REVUE—A modern symphonic study by Clark Harrington, "Manhattan Nocturnette," will be featured on the "Andre Kostelnetzky Presents" program this evening at 8:30 o'clock over the Columbia-WGST hookup. A variety of popular and classical compositions will be performed by the orchestra and offered as solos by Evan Evans, baritone, with concert orchestra, Howard Barlow, conductor.

BRISK—The Philadelphia orchestra's 15-minute concert this evening will be devoted to Mozart's concerto for oboe and orchestra. The program is scheduled on WGST at 8 o'clock this evening.

LATE—Vincent Lopez and his orchestra will be heard in a half-hour broadcast over the Columbia system and WGST tonight at 11 o'clock. Lopez is noted for his distinctive renditions of popular tunes.

will be set, he also knows that unless he goes down four tricks, the saving at match-point scoring will be more than worth while. Four hundred and fifty points is less than 600 or 670 and, of course, if your opponents can by good play make six no-trump, even without bidding it, a set of 700 points will turn out to be a good sacrifice.

5—This is the star bid by North. North knows just how East has reasons and has reasoned the same way. He does not wish to allow the opponents to save a vulnerable game, even for 450 points. Although the difference would be negligible in Rubber Bridge, in Howell play it might be more than sufficient to give North and South a cold bottom. North bids four no-trump rather than four spades so that the Opening lead cannot come through his Ace-Queen of hearts.

Five no-trump was easily made in the play. Had East been allowed to play the hand at four hearts doubled, East and West would have made a good score, the maximum penalty being three tricks or less, depending on the defense.

TOMORROW'S HAND.
What contract should be reached by North and South with the cards below?

How to Relieve Headaches in Three Minutes

When you have one of those violent, nerve-racking headaches, from inorganic causes, you can get soothing relief in three minutes with "B. C.," a reliable, pleasant-to-take remedy.

"B. C." is prepared by a registered pharmacist, compounded on a different principle from most relief-giving agencies in that it contains several ingredients so blended and proportioned as to accomplish in a few minutes what we believe no one drug formula can do in so short a time. "B. C." should also be used for the relief of muscular aches and pains, common colds and neuralgia; for reducing fever and quieting a distressed nervous system without opiates, narcotics or such habit-forming drugs. Get "B. C." in 10c and 25c packages, wherever drugs are sold.—(adv.)

DEATH TAKES R.G. DAVIS CLARKE CO. BOARD HEAD

Funeral Services To Be Held This Afternoon in Athens Church.

ATHENS, Ga., Dec. 25.—R. G. Davis, chairman of the board of commissioners of Clarke county, and at his home near here this morning at 10 o'clock of pneumonia. Mr. Davis became ill last Friday night.

Funeral services will be conducted from the First Baptist church here Tuesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, by Dr. J. C. Wilkinson, pastor of the church, and Dr. E. L. Hill, pastor of First Presbyterian church here. Interment will be at Oconee Hill cemetery, with McDorman-Bridges funeral home in charge.

The active pallbearers will be: J. M. Billing, H. K. Nicholson, W. M. Bryant, Alexander Scudder, Gordon Hale, Dr. J. F. Hammett, Honorary pallbearers will be officials of the Clarke county government and officials and employees of the Georgia Power Company here. Mr. Davis was superintendent of transportation for the power company, a position which he held for 37 years. He was one of the oldest officials in the Athens division of the power company, having become connected with the organization when it was the Athens Railway and Electric Company.

Born in Banks county, March 17, 1871, Mr. Davis was 63 years of age. He came to Athens 37 years ago, where he had since become one of the county's most successful farmers and businessmen. He was elected a member of the Clarke board of commissioners 10 years ago, succeeding Hugh W. White, who resigned. Mr. Davis was chairman of the recently organized board of advisors for the federal emergency re-employment agency in this county.

Surviving Mr. Davis are his wife, his father, J. B. Davis, of Athens; two sons, J. C. Davis, a well-known Athens contractor and industrialist; Dorsey Davis, attorney and a candidate for attorney-general of Georgia two years ago; Alfred Davis, Winterville; two sisters, Miss Julia Davis, Athens, and Mrs. George Sexton, Inman, S. C.

Mr. Davis was owner of large farming interests near here and a very popular citizen. He was one of the most valued officials of the power company and as county commissioner was very active in maintaining an efficient and economically operated county government in Clarke, which is recognized as one of the most successfully operated counties from a financial and governmental service standpoint in the state.

Doctors Give Creosote For Chest Colds

For many years our best doctors have prescribed creosote in some form for coughs, colds and bronchitis, knowing how dangerous it is to let them hang on.

Creosolium with creosote and six other highly important medicinal elements, quickly and effectively stops coughs and colds that otherwise might lead to serious trouble.

Creosolium is powerful in the treatment of colds and coughs, yet it is absolutely harmless and is pleasant and easy to take.

Your own druggist guarantees Creosolium by refunding your money if you are not relieved after taking Creosolium as directed. Beware the cough or cold that hangs on. Always keep Creosolium on hand for instant use.—(adv.)

Golden Eaglets To Plant Tree Honoring Memory of Mrs. Bayard

The Golden Eaglets of the Atlanta Girl Scout Council extend an invitation to Girl Scouts, leaders, council members and parents and friends of Girl Scouts to attend the tree planting ceremony in memory of Mrs. Bayard at Camp Civitania on Sunday, December 31, at 3:30 o'clock. Mrs. Bayard was well known to all Girl Scouts as "Mother B."

When Civitania was first started as a Girl Scout camp in 1925, Mrs. Bayard attended camp with her daughter, Mrs. Frank Holland, who was the Girl Scout director at this time. From that date through the summer of 1933 she never missed a camping season and her spirit of selflessness and cheer will always be remembered by those who knew her. It is in appreciation of her service and love that the Golden Eaglets have planned this memorial service and the tree to be planted will be a living memorial to one who was a friend to all and a mother to every Girl Scout.

The ceremony was written for the occasion by Miss Helen Bauer, a junior at Vanderbilt University. Misses Sarah Rowman, Gail Nelson and Dorothy Kethley, will be the speakers and Misses Betty and Frances Smith will sing.

The Eaglets will plant a Japanese Ginke tree, which was particularly liked by "Mother B." and will be planted in "Hollandell," the campfire site which was named for Mrs. Holland, one of the charter members of the Girl Scout Council. A Girl Scout tree marker will be placed by the tree.

The members of the Golden Eaglet Association are Miss Gail Nelson, president; Miss Betty Smith, vice president; Miss Virginia Wilkinson, secretary; and Misses Helen Bauer, Sarah Rowman, Emily Carlton, of Washington, D. C.; Edythe Epstein, Lillian Fairlee, Anne Wynn Fleming, Dorothy Fugitt, Marion Fugitt, Helen Gaffen, Marguerite Gunn, Virginia Heard, Aldora Hudson, Edna Karston, Dorothy Kethley, Frances McDonald, Katherine McMillan, Josephine Newbury, Catherine Nix, Lettie Reed, Lundy Sharp, Elizabeth Solomon, Lucile Taylor, Oza Tentak, and Louise Wesley.

Helen Cay Parker Memorial Scholarship Is Presented to Tallulah Falls School

The Helen Cay Parker Memorial scholarship at Tallulah Falls school is the tribute paid by Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Parker, of Atlanta, in memory of their beautiful young daughter, who passed away on October 14, 1933.

By the gift of $2,000 scholarships at Tallulah become perpetual and maintain at the school for all time a mountain girl or boy whose chance in life through education is secured by these living memorials, each of which bears a name chosen by the donors.

Helen Parker was one of the most beautiful and admired of Atlanta's younger girls and her sudden death cast a gloom over the whole city where her friends and those of her father and mother are numbered by hundreds, and Atlanta mourned her loss.

The girls' circle for Tallulah Falls school paid immediate tribute of affection and sorrow to her memory by the creation of the Helen Parker Memorial scholarship for the present year and by the gift of her father and mother this memorial at the well-known mountain school is made perpetual.

A GOLDEN OPPORTUNITY IN SILVER

In accordance with the recent order of President Roosevelt, on January 1, 1934, the government will buy silver for coinage at a price estimated at 64 1/2 cents an ounce, an increase of 50% from its price a week ago.

This order will undoubtedly cause a drastic increase in the price you pay for silver at retail. For this reason we suggest that you fill out your flatware pattern immediately. The present prices on silver represent a value that will probably not be duplicated in a decade.

Miss Smith Weds Dr. H. E. Talmadge In Athens, Georgia

ATHENS, Ga., Dec. 25.—Claiming state-wide social interest today is the announcement of the marriage of Miss Madeline Louise Smith, daughter of Mrs. Burwell Greene Smith, of Atlanta, to Dr. Harry Erwin Talmadge, of Athens, Ga., the impressive ceremony having taken place here today at high noon, at the residence of the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Julius Y. Talmadge, on Prince avenue.

The bride, a lovely blond, was educated at the University of Alabama and the Alabama College for Women, and is prominently connected with distinguished Georgia families, tracing her lineage on her paternal side to General Nathaniel Greene, of Revolutionary fame, and closely related to the Greene family of Washington, Ga.

Dr. Talmadge is the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Julius Y. Talmadge, who are socially prominent and outstanding in civic work and cultural circles. He was graduated from the University of Georgia, where he received his A. B. degree, and was a member of the Kappa Alpha fraternity. He graduated from the medical department of Emory University last June, and is a member of the Alpha Kappa medical fraternity.

Dr. Talmadge and his bride left for New York city, where they will reside for two years, where Dr. Talmadge will do interne work. Upon the completion of his internship in the city, he will return to Athens to establish his residence.

Woman's Circle Given Luncheon

A luncheon was enjoyed by members of the Young Woman's Circle of St. Andrew's Episcopal church Wednesday at the home of Mrs. J. L. Wilson, 880 Oak Hill avenue, S. W.

A miniature sleigh drawn by tiny reindeer, placed upon a mound of artificial snow, was the central decoration of the table.

Mrs. L. J. Bradberry, chairman, was presented with an electrical gift by the circle.

Mrs. Bradberry presented each member of the circle with a lovely linen handkerchief. Miss Nadine Cooper, Bible teacher, was presented with a gift from Mrs. Bradberry for attending all business and circle meetings of the year.

Contests and games were played. Mrs. H. W. Tweedy, Mrs. W. O. Petty, Mrs. L. J. Bradberry and Mrs. R. E. Guilbeau winning prizes.

Miss Carpenter's Marriage To Mr. White Is Announced

MRS. DANIEL WOODS WHITE.
Photograph by Elliott's Peachtree Studio.

Unusual social interest centers in the announcement of the marriage of Miss Isabelle McNeill Carpenter to Daniel Woods White, which was quietly solemnized last September first, in the presence of a few close friends. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Williston Cox Carpenter, of 2260 Peachtree road, and is the sister of Miss Virginia Carpenter. The bride was attired for the occasion in an olive green wool crepe ensemble, with hat and accessories of brown. She wore a shoulder bouquet of orchids and valley lilies.

By her rare personal charm, the bride has endeared herself to a wide circle of friends throughout the state. She attended the Girls' High school and graduated at Washington Seminary, where she was a member of the Sigma Delta Sorority. She is a descendant of two of Georgia's and Tennessee's most prominent and aristocratic families. Her father, Williston Cox Carpenter, a native of Knoxville, Tenn. He is a member of the firm of Trammell Scott Company, and is well known in the world of sports. Through this paternal line of lineage, the bride traces her ancestry to many prominent New England and southern families, including the Roots, Packards, Richards, Madisons, Carpenters, Talbotts, McNeills, Willistons, Kings and Coxes.

The bride's mother was Miss Ella Estelle Burney, of Atlanta. She is the daughter of the late Julius Augustus Burney, and Sarah Maria Ware, of Dublin and Atlanta. Mr. Burney was prominently identified with insurance circles throughout the state.

Mrs. Carpenter is active in the civic and patriotic organizations throughout the state, being treasurer of the Atlanta chapter, D. A. R.; treasurer of the Georgia Society, United States Daughters of 1812; treasurer of the General John Floyd Chapter, United States Daughters of 1812; secretary of the Georgia Branch, Sons and

FRIENDLY COUNSEL

BY CAROLINE CHATFIELD

Problems of general interest submitted by readers will be discussed in this column. Correspondence invited. Your name held in confidence. Write Miss Chatfield, care The Atlanta Constitution.

Dear Miss Chatfield: What do you think are the most attractive qualities a woman can have in dealing with a man? In other words, what do men like best in women?
INQUIRER.

Answer: They are two different questions for a woman has to make the best of her natural endowment. She cannot be timid and retiring if she is bold and assertive. She cannot be frank and confiding if she is reticent and secretive. She cannot be comfortable and companionable if she is highly nervous and fluttery. She can take any of these strong or weak points, as the case may be, and bend them to fit the necessities of the case. But the chances are that she will be sought out by the men who are attracted to her for her native qualifications. One man will love a timid, retiring creature, whereas another will despise her for those traits. One man will like an independent, self-sufficient woman, whereas another will run from her.

There are certain general rules which a woman instinctively knows in dealing with men. One of them is to cater to the individual taste of the man in question. Sometimes it leads to disaster, for one cannot act indefinitely. The stage clothes and the stage manners get awfully tiresome after awhile and the temptation to strip them off and be one's self is too strong to resist. Just as the water is always seeking its level, women are seeking to be ourselves. We can dam up the tide and delay it but we cannot stop it indefinitely. Sooner or later the men who know us intimately, know us for what we are.

There are as many tastes about women as there are different types of men to entertain them. But there are some distinctly feminine traits admired by men generally: Personal daintiness, good nature, courage, a willingness to defer to the man's judgment in large matters and willingness to settle the small ones without appeal to him, quick sympathy and understanding, talent for home-making, ability to plan and prepare good food. These are some of the things that men brag about in their wives, which gives a pretty good clue to what they admire.

We know, too, that men like women who provide comfort; all sorts of comfort. Men are the burden bearers and the old proverb, "Make way for the burden bearer," is applicable to these men who do bear the financial burdens. They have their days filled with strife. They are fighting for advantage. They are running after dollars. They are trying to find safe places for those dollars, once they have caught up with them. They are seeking out new places where they may find more dollars and rushing to get to them before their competitors get to them.

These are some of the burdens men bear when the day's work is done they like a complete change. They don't want to compete. They don't want to rush. They don't want to fight. They want to sit down and be "made over." They want to be told they are heroes whether they have been successful or not. They want soft feminine sweetness and soft voiced women around. They are taut and they want some relaxing influence. They deserve it and should have it.

Men like best in women what they haven't within themselves, whatever that may be. The women who are clever enough to give it to them have a rich reward.
CAROLINE CHATFIELD.Dear Miss Chatfield: I am married to a man who provides well for me but treats me with utter indifference. He takes me nowhere and confines the proof of his love to an occasional verbal expression of it. I very much fear there is another woman in the picture. Sometimes I think I will check out of my marriage. Am I not justified?
THELMA S.Answer: What would you gain by checking out? Taking for granted that you love him, you would be more wretchedly separated from him, not knowing with whom or where he was, than you are now living under the same roof with him. Checking out would mean the loss of financial security which means much to you, or you wouldn't have mentioned it. You would lose the comforting assurance which he gives you by word of mouth and it is comforting. You would be resigning in favor of a phantom creature whose existence you merely suspect. If she is now only a phantom she would likely become a real flesh and blood person soon after you closed the door behind you. Hope would go out of that door with you and a heart heavier than the one you feel in your breast today.

DIES IN BARCELONAFather of Autonomy in Catalonia Was 74 Years Old.

BARCELONA, Spain, Dec. 25.—(P)—Colonel Francisco Macia, who fought for years for the autonomy of Catalonia, saw his dream realized and became its first president, died today.

Death overtook the old warrior after a valiant struggle against disease. He was 74.

For four years he was in exile, following exposure of a plot of international ramifications to overthrow the monarchy, only to return in triumph in 1931, aid in the fall of the throne and lead the fight establishing Catalonia as an independent state.

Breathing his last words, he said the region for which he had devoted his life to free, was endangered by political disaster. "Without me," he said, "Catalonia's political structure will collapse. The people are torn apart."

The dying president apparently referred to recent serious divisions in the Esquerre party which threatens to destroy its power in the region.

Claude G. Bowers, United States ambassador to Spain, transmitted condolences of the American government through Consul General Dawson.

Gigantic demonstrations throughout the four provinces of Catalonia—Barcelona, Gerona, Lerida and Tarragona—were held in Macia's memory with crowds chanting, "Macia is dead—long live Macia."

Acting President Juan Casanovas announced parliament would be convoked eight days after the death of the president to elect a new president.

Senor Macia was elected president in 1932, shortly after the new Spanish republic approved his plan for Catalonia's autonomy, subject to certain control of the republic.

A former deputy, Macia for years battled for self-rule of the state. He was arrested in 1926 by French police, who charged men and arms had been assembled on the French border by Macia and Captain Ricotti Garibaldi, grandson of the Italian patriot, to overthrow the dictatorship of Primo De Rivera and the monarchy.
After his trial in Paris, he was given a light sentence and was expelled from Spain by De Rivera. He was put out of Argentina and returned to Brussels to direct separatist activities from there.
His expulsion lifted he returned to Barcelona in 1931. When the monarchy tottered he took possession of Barcelona and proclaimed a republic.MAJOR FRANKLIN IRWIN.
PARIS, Dec. 25.—(P)—Major Francis G. Irwin, 75, of New York, a retired United States army officer, died in a hospital Sunday.MRS. BLANCHE CAMPBELL.
HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 25.—(P)—The death from a sudden heart attack of Mrs. Blanche Frederic Campbell, 55, has ended a long career as an actress of the stage and screen.

She died near Visalia yesterday while en route with her husband, Donald Campbell, stage manager for the Henry Duffy productions, to a Christmas service in General Grant Memorial park.

A native of Brooklyn, N. Y., Mrs.

Campbell played on the New York stage and in stock and repertory companies throughout the country. Her most famous role of both stage and screen was that Mrs. Davidson in "Rain." She played with Gloria Swanson in the film version of the play after enacting the role for four years on the stage.

LIEUT. OLIVER MURDICK.
KEENE, N. H., Dec. 25.—(P)—Funeral services for Lieutenant Oliver P. Murdick, 89, last survivor of the seventh Vermont regiment and former commander of the Grand Army of the Republic in New Hampshire, who died while his son was hastening to his bedside from Lincoln, Neb., will be held tomorrow afternoon.

The son, Rev. Perry H. Murdick, pastor of Trinity church, Lincoln, died about 24 hours by poor train connections, arrived in Keene last night. His father had died about 48 hours before his arrival.

The elder Murdick had lived in Byron, Mich., and Rutland, Vt., before coming to Keene in 1887.

BREAK O' DAY!

By Ralph McKee

Jones' Return to Competition Is Golf's Christmas Present

It occurs to me that the game of golf has had quite the nicest Christmas present of all, even though it was delivered some weeks before the day of days rolled around.

I am referring to the announcement by Bobby Jones that he would compete in the masters' tournament at Augusta this spring; a tournament which will be strictly an invitation tournament with the best golfers of this little globe competing.

Bobby Jones will not compete in any other tournament. This, I suspect, is going to be difficult to get into the skulls of the good old Bono Publico, whom I love very much but whose skull is very hard indeed now and then.

This is a very fine gift to golf. I am rather inclined to believe that Bobby Jones will win the tournament again or, should he be a bit off his game for some unknown reason, he will finish in second place. He is to take none of the prize money should he be fortunate enough to win. He is playing merely for fun.

It will be a very fine thing for golf—this return of Bobby Jones. His game seems to be as good as ever, if one may judge from the weekly rounds at East Lake and at various other courses.

Bobby Jones' game is too soundly based to ever go haywire. There has always been some argument about whether Bobby Jones' game was as sound as Harry Vardon's. Harry Vardon, if I recall correctly, just about won an open tournament from us a few years ago when he was up in his fifties. And I imagine Bobby Jones will be able to do the same thing should he choose to.

Now, I do not see why there is much argument about whether Jones' game is sounder than Vardon's. Because his game isn't as sound. It's sounder. It is simply the greatest game of golf the game has ever seen, or ever will, for that matter. And I can give you cards and spades and win that argument at any time. Jones' game of golf is the best one yet.

It was a very fine Christmas present. And I am only too sorry that all other sports cannot have the same sort of gift.

What would heavyweight boxing give for the return of a Dempsey as good as ever? And tennis could use another Bill Tilden in his twenties. And the boss game could use another Man of War instead of the platers that are in it.

PARDON, PLEASE.

You will just have to pardon the old boy. It seems that I am the only resident of the state who is at all excited about the coming game at the Rose Bowl in Pasadena between the Columbia Lions and the Stanford football team.

But I am a very non-partisan person in matters where the state of California is concerned. And quite unselfish. All I wish is that the eastern teams win all the games they play with California teams. This may not be the desired state of right-mindedness but it is all right.

I think the Michigan team could have gone out there and murdered any team on the coast, but unfortunately it had to be a team which may not win. It does not matter to Lou Little, of course, but he will prove a very grievous disappointment to me if he does not manage to get his team home a winner in that game.

WINTERING AT TUCSON.

The Columbia team is spending the week at Tucson, Ariz., which is where the Georgia team stayed for three or four days before the game with Southern California.

Tucson is a very fine little city. The air is bracing and there is a pleasant place to rest called The Pirate's Cove. There are no pirates in the Pirate's Cove. Just pleasant people who appreciate their customers.

And there is a very fine football layout at the University of Arizona, which is in Tucson.

The scoreboard has a neighboring board on which is listed the schedule for the year. It includes games like Whittier and Flagstaff. Those names have been on the football score lists each year but I had always imagined them to be just names the people used to pad out the lists. But they seem to be real places.

In fact it might be better if they were not real because the Whittier team, called The Poets, was a very terrible football team this year. They lost to the University of Arizona team while we were resting with Georgia. It was a big, sluggish team.

And no better than Whittier's poetry, which is pretty bad, too, although I recall that it is still listed in the school books. I would advise the students to skip it entirely as Mr. Whittier's poetry and football team are not so good this year.

SHOELESS JOE JACKSON.

There is a move on to give Shoeless Joe Jackson a reprieve from the life sentence which baseball placed on him because he knew too much about the Black Sox scandal. Just as Mr. Roosevelt reprieved a lot of the conscientious objectors.

This seems to me to be a situation which is in keeping with our national life. I have read about memorials being erected to members of the Harding administration, for instance, and what they did by way of stealing from the nation's coffers and setting a terrible example for the youth of the land makes Shoeless Joe Jackson's puny little graft seem nothing at all. We are a pretty daffy country anyhow, and as proof of it I would cite the national indignation aroused by an illiterate ball player taking a few hundred dollars when every day a lot of public officials over the nation are stealing us blind. And there is no indignation at all.

Joe Jackson was supposed to have been one of those who ruined the game for the little dirty-mouthed kids in the street, but it did Babe Ruth saved it. So it doesn't matter. We will never know how many of the baseball gamblers they missed. And it always seemed to me that as long as they did nothing to the gamblers who paid the money to Jackson and others and permitted them to remain in our midst, so to speak, that it was a little incongruous to get excited about the players.

THE DAY-AFTER WISH.

I just hope that when you go downtown today to exchange the tie which Aunt Sarah sent you for one you can wear you won't meet Aunt Sarah exchanging the vase you sent her for something she wants.

ALEX ATTENDS COACHES' MEET IN WINDY CITY

Football, Head of Collegiate Family, To Get Annual Going Over.

By William Weekes.

CHICAGO, Dec. 25.—(AP)—Football, the head of the collegiate athletic family, will get its annual going over from the men who teach it, tomorrow and Wednesday in the thirteenth annual meeting of the American Football Coaches' Association.

Attendance registrations indicated that a record number of coaches will sit in on the sessions, being held in Chicago for the first time, and outside of New York for the first time since the World War. The opening session will be held tomorrow afternoon and the powwow will close Wednesday night with the annual banquet.

The meeting will get under way with a banquet by Dr. M. A. A. of Yale, and Floyd R. Eastwood, of New York University, on football injuries and fatalities. The committee has made an exhaustive study of the problem, and the report will reveal how fatalities decreased from 49 in 1931, and 33 in 1932, to 28 last fall.

The liveliest question on the program, proposed changes in the rules, will be presented by Harry Kipke, coach of Michigan's Western Conference champions. At least five changes have been suggested, and are recommended to the rules committee. They include: Return of the goal posts to the goal line, increase the sideline zone from 10 to 15 yards, and a suggestion to rule that the ball, when in possession in back of its 20-yard line, instead of punting, a suggestion to rule that the fourth down forward passes which fall incomplete over the goal line as touchbacks.

Wednesday morning will be devoted to reports from committee chairmen and district representatives. In the afternoon, punting will be discussed by Colonel P. B. Parker, of the University of Tennessee; Bernie Bierman, of Minnesota, will talk on the quick kick; Harvey Harmon, of Pennsylvania, will discuss the possibility of the lateral pass, and E. E. (Tad) Wieman, Princeton's line coach, will lecture on line play.

Hugo Bezdek, director of athletics at Pennsylvania State College, and a former president of the association, will discuss the association's plan to have a national championship game, to be played at the University of Michigan, between the champions of the Eastern and Western divisions. He also will discuss the possibility of a national championship game, to be played at the University of Michigan, between the champions of the Eastern and Western divisions.

On the verge of his departure yesterday, Coach Alexander, a past president of the organization, could not state any definite questions that would come up for vote, but he did state some of the resolutions of the southern and eastern coaches' divisions would be discussed.

Coach Alexander, like most of the other progressive coaches, is in favor of restoring certain features of the rules which have been a handicap to the offense.

HANDICAP BEGINS HERE TONIGHT

The Capital City Christmas handicap ten pin tournament will officially open at 8 o'clock tonight and big pin bowlers will be vying for the attractive awards to be awarded the four winners in the order in which they finish at Bick's Bowling Center.

Not one of the three bowlers who won the awards in the initial staging of the contest last December will compete in the holiday event this week. Leo Goraewski, the winner for last season, has not been active in league bowling and as the tourney is on a handicap basis, unless he participates from the scratch mark, he would be ineligible to bowl. The two other winners were out-of-town visitors from Chattanooga and Fort Benning, Ga., and as the event is confined to local bowlers this year these former winners will not be noticed in the lineup either.

Nevertheless, the tournament will not want for color and sparkling thrills for some of the outstanding bowlers in the city will be trying for big game totals as the bowling progresses from day to day.

Aloysius "Soup" O'Sonog and John Inman Bell, the two leading bowlers of the city for the current season, will bowl their games from scratch, the only league bowlers to compete without the assistance of a handicap tacked to their games and if these boys get hot some mighty big scores will be turned in.

The holiday spirit will be observed at 8 o'clock each evening, five games are bowled, and the total pin fall, including the handicaps allotted, will determine the winners. The entire ten pin tournament is $1.50, which includes the cost of the bowling.

Sun Almond, the California lightweight champion, wrestled R. Wood, topped the Pasadena field yesterday, with a 282 for the 72 holes. In the four 18-hole rounds he had only one bad card. That was his 75 yesterday morning in the third round. He started off with a 69, two under par, added a 67, and came right down the final stretch with a par 71. The last round might easily have been a 67, as four of his putts struck on the lip of the cup.

Runyan was two under par for the 72 holes, and although his total score

Golf Facts

WOMEN PLAYERS COULD DRIVE AS FAR AS MEN BY USING THE SAME TECHNIQUE.

Alex Morrison says: Golf is a game wherein the main object is to properly apply whatever force is used—and when a small amount of force is properly applied by means of making the correct swing, the ball is made to travel great distances.

It takes but the strength of a child to send a ball over 200 yards! Of course, a weak person must have a better swing than a strong one, but few seem to realize this.

I do not know one person who doesn't have strength enough to keep up with the strong players.

Certainly women could drive just as far as men if they would learn to make the proper swing. And there is nothing about the correct swing that women can't perform.

Klick Beats Chocolate, Wins Title

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 25.—(UP)—Frankie Klick, of San Francisco, captured the National Boxing Association junior lightweight boxing championship by knocking out Kid Chocolate, of Cuba, here today. The final came after 2 minutes 58 seconds of a hard-fought battle. Klick, who was scheduled to be a 15-rounder.

It was the second time in his career that the flashy Cuban had been knocked out by a contender.

C. F. Gibbons, J. H. Sperry, E. A. Harper, J. F. Corbett, C. M. Hambrige, were slated to get away with their five games on the opening night and will give the bowlers to follow something to cheer about.

Whitman, second high man for the Georgia Ten Pin league, was one of the last to enter, forwarding his entry to the office of the alleys Saturday afternoon.

The "Five Eagles and a Black Crow," meaning L. Perryman, A. D. Coulton, T. Althausen, H. E. Elmer, H. E. Parker and Harry Cavan, are slated to bowl their games on Thursday evening. No acceptance has been received of the challenge issued by this group to the bowling team of the Georgia Ten Pin league, and interested teams should communicate with Klick's Bowling Center, Atlanta, Ga., for further details.

No duckpin or tenpin leagues are slated to bowl this week, with the lone exception of the popular Bell System pin pool, which is scheduled, as usual, on Thursday evening at 7:30 o'clock. All other league, with the exception of those scheduled on Mondays, resume play the week of January 1, most Monday night leagues begin after holiday play on Monday, January 8.

What about a match between the Black-McKay duo and Dewey P. Bowen and Carl Tidwell Saturday night at the Bell System pin pool? A venture to say that there would be even more spectators present than viewed the outcome of the Black-McKay and Kellam-Tidwell tie-up and surely Bowen and Tidwell are capable of the best in duck pin bustin'!

If the match can be arranged, it will probably be the final workout for John B. McKay and George W. McKay prior to their departure for the United States sweepstakes in Washington, D. C., the following week-end.

Dewey Bowen uses the unusual "push" ball delivery and Carl Tidwell has been burning the wood with his heavy average in two leagues.

Miami High Wins Over Syracuse

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 25.—(AP)—In a fast but penalty ridden game, Miami High school defeated High of Syracuse, N. Y., 18 to 7, before a Christmas Day crowd of 4,000.

Almond Wrestles At Bellwood Club

Tony Padrone, the Italian grappler from St. Louis with a very mean reputation, is matched with Sun Almond on the Tuesday wrestling card of the Bellwood Athletic Club for the night after Christmas.

Tony took on Elmo Glenn last Tuesday at Bellwood in a special match. Tony agreeing to lose the fall if he failed to pin Elmo within 20 minutes. He did, in 16 minutes with a series of body slams. After the fall Padrone lifted his opponent and the fans expected him to carry him to his corner. Instead Tony slammed him to the mat again with a resounding jar.

Sun Almond, the California lightweight champion, wrestled R. Wood, topped the Pasadena field yesterday, with a 282 for the 72 holes. In the four 18-hole rounds he had only one bad card. That was his 75 yesterday morning in the third round. He started off with a 69, two under par, added a 67, and came right down the final stretch with a par 71. ## MIDWINTER GOLF TO RENEY OPENS AT PINEHURST

George Dunlap To Make Another Attempt on Title.

PINEHURST, N. C., Dec. 25.—(AP) All was in readiness here tonight for the opening tomorrow of the 31st annual midwinter golf championship with George T. Dunlap Jr., national amateur champion who has won the midwinter crown seven times in eight years, preparing for another attempt on the title.

The play ends on Saturday with qualifying rounds and finals 18 holes. A gold medal will be given for the best qualification score while a trophy for the winner, runner-up and winner of the consolation will be given in each division.

Dunlap is making his first competitive start since he won the United States title at Cincinnati last fall and says sentiment, more than anything else, swayed his decision to enter the midwinter competition.

Halbert J. Blue, who was beaten by Dunlap 5 and 4 last year by the champion's round of 67 in the final, will be one of the principal contenders for the crown.

Dunlap began his winning streak in 1925 when he won from Walter Swape, the Yale captain, and was defeated against Forbes Wilson, former Yale number one player. He conquered Gene Homans two years in a row but finally was dethroned in 1929 by C. E. Green, Jr., who himself was a former national champion.

The following year, however, Dunlap resumed his stride and won from Wilson, the Yale captain, and was defeated against Forbes Wilson, former Yale number one player. He conquered Gene Homans two years in a row but finally was dethroned in 1929 by C. E. Green, Jr., who himself was a former national champion.

EAST AND WEST STARS PRACTICE

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 25.—(AP) Stars who will roam the gridiron here New Year's Day in the annual east-west charity football game mixed up lively practice sessions today as part of their Christmas celebration.

The 22 pigskin artists from the eastern half of the country transferred their activities to Palo Alto and worked out on the Stanford University fields.

Charles Dick Hanley, of Northwestern, and Andy Kerr, of Colgate, sent their charges through a two-hour drill, almost entirely offensive tactics. Coach Hanley said he was well pleased with the eastern linemen, describing them as "some of the best we have assembled in a long time."

That field-goal kicking may play an important part of the attack was indicated by the hopes of producing the Ceppi, Princeton tackle, and Paul Pardonner, Purdue quarterback, to concentrate on booting the ball through the uprights.

Ceppi is a placement kicker, while Pardonner specializes in drop-kicking. In practice yesterday Ceppi sent one through the goal posts from the 40-yard line.

Both left and right-handed passing will be part of the east's aerial game. Nick Lukats, of Notre Dame, and Beattie Feathers, of Tennessee, halfbacks, are right-handers and "throw" the ball with the right hand. While Laws, Iowa quarterback, and Mike Sebastian, Pittsburgh half, are port-side flippers.

Western players worked out two hours here under Coaches Orin Hollingbery, of Washington State, and Percy Locoy, of Denver. Backfield men were shifted about and linemen juggled in the line. The 11 starters, Merle Nehl, of Columbia College, Portland, and Phil Sobole, of Washington State, will alternate at quarterback. The triple-threat possibilities of George Sauer, all-American fullback from Nebraska, have particularly impressed the coaches. Early indications are Sauer will be the main threat of the west.

In Adolph Schwammel, Oregon State tackle, Coaches Hollingbery and Locoy believe they have the answer to the east's field-goal threat. Schwammel already has demonstrated he can toe the ball through the uprights from long distances. He has placed-kicks of more than 40 yards in his credit.

Other winners and their prizes: Charles T. Sweet is a grand rod; S. W. Roper, 50, boot laces; Guy Melcher, 49, gun oil; Oliver Healey, 48, dog chain; Bill Healey, 48, boot grease; L. B. Duke, 48, cleaning rod; C. C. Kunkel, 46, dog whistle; Jack Orr, 46, boot laces; Bill Parker, 46, gun oil; G. Warren, 45, dog coupling; E. L. Wright, 45, boot grease; Dr. McElroy, 43, dog chain; Jack Troy, 42, boot laces; Mrs. Donald McLain, 41, cleaning rod; Tom Cassels, 40, dog whistle; W. C. Warren, 38, boot grease.

It was, as mentioned, a grand shoot. Sweet is a grand rod. Moore, two slender gentlemen, got together and played a composite Santa Claus role.

The grounds of the Capital Gun Club are very pretty. Great oaks, which in the spring are green and gray, stand out like silent sentinels in the background.

There is a good echo in the valley as the guns fire. Across the hilltop you look down into a forest of green, gray and other pleasing combinations of color.

The natural beauty of the grounds is compelling. Jack Troy is going to make certain improvements on the traps and then there will be nothing to be desired. It will be perfect.

Mrs. Donald McLain, who missed winning the grand American handicap, women's division, by one bird, appeared at the traps Saturday and competed with the men shooters. She made an excellent showing.

Skeet is attracting all the shooters. The 16-yard exponents are adding to the grand sport. And they are becoming converts.

J. P. C. Victorious By Score of 52-25

Joe Bonowitz's Jewish Progressive Club basketball team continued on its winning jaunt during the week-end with a decisive 52-25 victory over the Jacksonville Seitzers on the Pryor Street court.

Coach Bonowitz, center, with 28 points, and Izzy Friedman, forward, with 14, led the shooting for the J. P. C.'s before an enthusiastic holiday crowd.

Coach Bonowitz announced that the J. P. C. quintet would invade Jacksonville on next Sunday night for a return game with the Seitzers and that the Florida Pipe Company would be played there Monday night. On Monday night week, Chattanooga Y. M. H. A., Bonowitz's old team, plays the J. P. C. here.

THE SPORTLIGHT

By Krautman Rice

What They Wanted for Christmas.

The Duffer—A different backswing—and a different downswing.

Connie Mack—A ladder leaning up against the cellar window.

Columbia—A deep pit for Corbus and a grappling hook for Grayson.

Tommy Loughran—An alpenstock for the Carnera fight.

The Prize-fight Game—A few fighters who will fight.

Babe Ruth—The same set of outfield fences for any ball in reach.

The Scrambled Dope.

Baseball experts after taking their Christmas vacation will face one of their hardest Stove league seasons before the first teams leave for southern or western sun in February.

This applies particularly to the American league, with Grove in Boston and Cochrane in Detroit.

The Red Sox will be an entirely different ball club. They are not neophyte winners, but one begins to get the ancient aroma that came from the days of Speaker, Lewis and Hooper.

The Yankees will be a larger guess than ever, but their pitching in 1934 can't be quite so spotty as it was in 1933.

The National league guessing contest will carry just as many kinks. In spite of the Giants' winning the National league pennant and then cracking the Senators, there are still thousands of non-combatants who don't believe Bill Terry's club can stand up through another race.

These still overlook the pitching arms of Hubbell, Schumacher, Fitzsimmons and Parmelee, and at least two of these pitching arms are quite young and subject to even better days ahead.

Chuck Klein will help the Cub argument in more ways than one, and the Cardinals will fly on faster wings.

But Terry has supreme faith in his ball club, and it is still a young ball club in the main.

At this early stage, the dope has yet to show any definite reason why Giants and Senators should be displaced.

Archie Comer, Jack Gray Win Christmas Shoot

Marksmen Make Merry at Skeet in Absence of Champion Buddy Jones.

By Jack Troy.

It was not a living Christmas tree but it served the purpose very well.

And the shoot itself was one of the finest of the season. What with the Christmas season, early closes and all, the results of the excellent Christmas shoot Saturday at the beautiful Capitol Gun Club grounds are just now getting into print.

A few of the boys gathered around and sang a little song dedicated to Buddy Jones, the southern skeet champion. It went something like this:

Oh, Buddy doesn't shoot here any more;
No, Buddy doesn't shoot here any more.
He tried to win a hat
But took it on the "lam."

Whoa, Buddy doesn't shoot here any more.

Jack Tway, the general secretary of the Capitol Gun Club, and his father, Charley Tway, supervisor, arranged to have a Christmas tree in the grounds and beneath the tree there were appropriate presents for winners and all others not winning.

A YULE PARTY.

Fact was, everybody was a winner, because any score was rewarded with a useful gift. The Tways gave attending sportsmen a fine Christmas party.

Archie Comer, of the Airport Gun Club, ran a straight on his first registered round and broke four more in the following round. But then Archie, who is used to going up in the air in planes, ran into difficulties and dropped five birds. His score of 45 was good for first prize, as Jack Tway, who broke 46, did not win a prize.

So Archie received a fruit cake.

Jack Gray, compatriot of Comer at the Airport club, was second high gun in the scratch division, winning a box of shells. He had a 47.

H. D. Morgan, with a 52, was the fruit cake winner in the handicap division. And J. R. Cothran, who broke 51, was second and winner of a box of shells.

Third place winner in the handicap division was L. E. Grant, whose 51 got him a flashlight.

OTHER PRIZES.

Other winners and their prizes: Charles T. Sweet is a grand rod; S. W. Roper, 50, boot laces; Guy Melcher, 49, gun oil; Oliver Healey, 48, dog chain; Bill Healey, 48, boot grease; L. B. ## LIONS' QUARTER CHIEF PROBLEM OF LITTLE

Thornhill Drills Stanford With Over-Confidence Fought Against.

By Paul Zimmerman.

TUCSON, Ariz., Dec. 25.—(AP)—Coach Lou Little, of Columbia's football team, had a new worry for Christmas today—physical staleness of his players as the Lions turned into their final week of preparation for the Rose tournament game with Stanford at Pasadena.

Cliff Montgomery, star Lion quarterback, was the central figure of the problem.

"There will be only one or two more workouts," said Little with a long face, in which I will dare give the boys much, but I mean anything bordering on a scrimmage.

"We'll start tapering off after today because some of the boys already are under 'the flu' (flu) and Montgomery entirely except for some warming up workouts."

Despite the fact that Columbia had only a few opportunities to work en route, the Lions' preparation was high to begin with—has continued to shrink to the point that it apparently has given Little and his staff cause for alarm.

Ordinarily 165 pounds of well put-up speed and agility, Montgomery is down to 160, and somewhat sluggish. Al Barabas, left halfback, also has been slightly off form.

The guards and tackles likewise have been a source of worry to Coach Little, who continues to fuss and stew about the Lions' lack of speed and power. Ferrara has made the most of spare time here, keeping his head buried in books since arrival.

With all of his own worries, Little had time to spread a little sunshine to others. He brought tears of joy to the eyes of a bedridden youth he visited yesterday on behalf of eastern friends. He also had a long visit with Sergeant Barron, crippled veteran who served under Little's command in France during the World War.

Overconfidence Worries Thornhill.

PASADENA, Dec. 25.—(AP)—Overconfidence of his men regarding Columbia was one of Coach Thornhill's worries today as he prepared to send his 36 Stanford University football players through their initial workout tomorrow in the Rose Bowl, scene of the New Year's tournament of roses game with Columbia University of New York City.

Thornhill said the mental attitude of his men was his greatest concern. Today he planned to give them a lecture on what underestimates have done to the Rose Bowl selections in previous Rose Bowl encounters.

"We'll have to be in the best of condition, mentally and physically, if we expect to turn in a victory," said Thornhill. "Columbia is a team that deserves to rank among the best in the country."

Bill Corbus, All-American guard, showed the Lions' views regarding Columbia but declared that was no need of worry over the mental condition of his teammates.
